

Via Email 1/10/2011

To Medical Radiation

My name is Stefano De Summa, a 27 year old radiographer from Turin, Italy. I have been looking through the Australian Institute of Radiography website, contemplating the idea of beginning the process to see if my qualifications will translate within Australia.

I am unclear on many points and anxious to spend the money involved. I just wanted to ask a very quick question. As a general bench mark, do you know anything about the likelihood of European university courses being recognized by the AIR? I have a Bachelors in Radiography and medical imaging and five years of clinical experience in a public hospital here in Turin. Any information you may have would be greatly appreciated, including any points of call where i may be able to pursue more general inquiries before having to commit the money and resources to the entire application process.

I am not asking for any definite answers from you, just anything I may be able to use as a general reference point as to my chances and future investigations.
Thank you very much for your time.

Stefano